

HOT PROPERTY VISIONARIES OF 2012

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 2012 MID DAY

INSIDE

Dev Ashish, Bhandup

pg2 Flori Hills by Shivalik Developers

pg8

www.mid-day.com

For a brighter tomorrow

What would make Mumbai a global city? The answers are endless. Swanky high-rises, congestion free roads, state-of-the-art infrastructural projects, green open spaces and a healthy lifestyle that's at par with global standards. It takes a lot of vision, passion and planning to take even a step forward in this mission. Here are a few dynamic developers who tell us how:

Now more than a home, Mumbai needs to develop the concept of living in terms of lifestyle amenities and green spaces. It needs to go higher vertically as well as with its dreams and aspirations. And we would like to create adequate space to accommodate every dreamer who comes to the city.

— NIMISH VORA, managing director, Kavya Buildcon Pvt Ltd

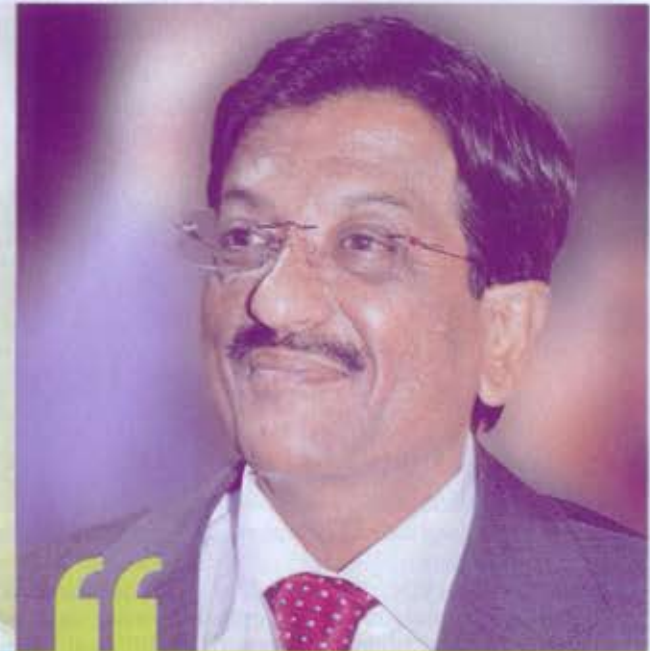

Whenever I stare at the towering Burj Khalifa, I so strongly have the urge to build something on a similar scale in Mumbai. That's my vision for Mumbai, that's my dream. I want to see Mumbai turn into, a global city, with sky-touching towers and robust public infrastructure.

— UDAY SURVE, managing director, Saaga Infra Projects (Pvt) Ltd

Mumbai's growth is proportionate to the growth of all strata of society. My dream is to see the entire Hindustan growing with this city. When it comes to the infrastructural development of Mumbai, it is high-time that the city grows vertically as well as horizontally.

— KIRAN CHAVAN, chairman and managing director, Sthaavar Infradev Pvt Ltd

Murbad, where we are active, will figure in the next expansion phase of Kalyan city. It will be home to several prestigious industries and factories as well as to business schools and engineering colleges. With its improved connectivity, it will be a much-in-demand housing destination.

— CHANDRAKUMAR MADHUSUDAN JAJODIA, chairperson, Madhusudan Group